“A Black Pioneer in a White Denomination”

Rev. Tim Temerson, Cir L’Bert Jr., and Scott Piepho

We begin our celebration of Black History Month with Rev. Egbert Ethelred Brown, who was a Unitarian minister and a leading voice in African American Humanism. Today we explore Rev. Brown’s extraordinary vision and ministry as well as his relationship with the larger Unitarian movement, a relationship characterized by elitism, marginalization, and white supremacy. The service will include a special collection for the Unitarian Universalist Association’s “The Promise and Practice of Our Faith” to benefit Black Lives of Unitarian Universalism.

Celebrating Our Journeys

Rev. Tim Temerson and Susan Wynn

As Unitarian Universalists we use the metaphor of the “journey” to describe our spiritual lives. Today we will explore what it means to make a spiritual journey as members of our congregation share their spiritual journey stories. Today’s service will feature the musical talents of the UU Band and also marks our annual UUCA Fun Hat Sunday so be sure to wear your most favorite and fun hat to church!

“An Epidemic of Despair”

Rev. Tim & the UUCA Behavioral Health Team

Over the last twenty years, death from suicide has increased dramatically. Join Rev. Tim and the UUCA Behavioral Health Ministry as we explore the roots of this epidemic of despair and ask what can be done to alleviate it.

“Remembering Jane Crow: An Intersectional Journey”

Rev. Tim Temerson

Although not well known during her lifetime, Pauli Murray was a leader in the struggle for racial justice and women’s rights. She was also transgender in an age when gender identity was never openly discussed. As we continue our celebration of Black History Month, today’s service will explore Murray’s life through the lens of intersectionality and the many ways identity impacted Murray’s own journey and work for justice.
